John Joshua : The Contribution of Human Capital towards Economic Growth in China before purchasing it in order to gage whether or not it would be worth my time, and all praised The Contribution of Human Capital towards Economic Growth in China:

This book develops a human capital model to explain transformational growth within different stages of economic development, which will induce technological changes and consequently will require a change in human capital. China is a case study in transition and can provide useful lessons to other emerging economies.

About the Author Dr John Joshua taught Economics and Accounting to undergraduates and post-graduates in Melbourne and in China for many years, while concurrently completing three separate PhDs at Monash University, Melbourne University and Deakin University in Sociology, Education and Economics respectively. His research interests are the economic, sociological and educational implications resulting from structural transformations occurring in emerging economies.
