deals with the very basics of investing. Loral Langemeier's philosophy is that everyone should take an active role in their investment decisions. Her position on "park and pray" investing comes through very loud and clear. There is a lot to be said for this view point. However there is a down side. If you are not willing to do your homework and to continue to monitor your investments, direct investment is laden with risk. While the book covers the high level view of many things, it is not an in depth, how-to guide. As she correctly points out, you must still build a team and get outside help. One of the best messages from this book is, do your homework and do your due diligence. She makes the point time and time again, you need a team of experts. She cautions people to listen and learn. The due diligence checklist is fair and she strongly recommends that you always evaluate the management of any investment. Again, it is a good easy to read book that gives a lot of general information. If you are looking for really in-depth, step by step, how-to manual, look elsewhere.
